Have you ever heard of SDGs? SDGs is an acronym for Sustainable Development Goals. It was adopted by United Nations Summit in 2015. 193 countries in the United Nations set 17 goals and these goals are composed by 169 targets to achieve the goals.

Nowadays, more companies are challenging various programs for SDGs. A moving company uses packing materials without using paper resources. This action contributes to keeping sustainable consumption and production. Also, a chain restaurant company goes to elementary schools and teaches children offshore problems and food waste. This lecture contributes to teaching children not only responsibility to make and use but also the importance of life below water.

We can do something for SDGs as well. We can adjust air conditioning temperature or take our own bags or drink bottles. These actions don't have great influence, but I think it is important to do something we can do right now.
